BECKY SAYS SHE DIDN'T

Is Glad to Get Rid of Guardian Magoon.

Doesn't Want Brown,
Wundenberg or Lightfoot.

Answer Filed in Which She Says
She Can't Adequately Express Her Pleasure.

Rebecca Panee filed an answer yesterday to J. Alfred Magoon's application to resign as her guardian, wherein she denies absolutely some of the statements made by her guardian. She not only says she has not refused to allow him to resign, but says she has always wanted him to get out, but objects to any of Magoon's friends and law partners which, she says, does not give her a "very wide choice." Becky also says she is willing and anxious to have Magoon resign and that "any attempt to adequately express the pleasure which such resignation affords her would only unnecessarily encumber the files of this court."

In her answer filed yesterday by Humphreys, Thompson & Watson Becky says:

"Now comes Rebecca Panee Humeku, and for an answer to the petition filed herein by her Guardian, J. Alfred Magoon, praying that he be allowed to resign as such Guardian, she says: That she denies absolutely that said Magoon has ever expressed his desire to her to resign his office as Guardian of her person and estate; that said Magoon, well knowing that this respondent believed him to be inimical to her best interests, having no other than a selfish concern in her affairs of property, and that she distrusted him and that he was repulsive to her, and for other good reasons, desired him to surrender his office and trust as Guardian aforesaid, said Magoon proposed to this respondent that he would resign therefrom, but only upon condition that she would consent to the appointment of either F. W. Wundenberg, J. Lightfoot, or C. A. Brown as his successor; that this respondent not believing that there was a very wide choice between said Magoon and the gentlemen proposed by him as his successor, declined to accede to the proposition of the aforesaid of the said Magoon, she preferring to leave the appointment of said Magoon's successor to the court, believing that the court would consider the appointment of any proper and competent person whom she might nominate in that behalf.

"This respondent now consents that the prayer of the petition filed herein may be granted, and she does so without any reservation; any attempt to adequately express the pleasure which such resignation affords her would only unnecessarily encumber the files of this court.

"Respondent prays that said Magoon may be ordered to file his final accounts as her guardian forthwith, and that upon the passing of the same, an order be made discharging him as her said Guardian.

"And as in duty bound, she will ever pray, etc.

"REBECCA PANEE HUMEKU."

THE KAPIOLANI ESTATE MUST PAY

The Kapiolani estate will have to pay a bill of exchange of $966.70 which was held by Grinbaum & Co., and which it is claimed has never been paid. The Supreme Court yesterday rendered a decision refusing to set aside the default made by Judge Robinson in the case. After the default had been entered J. F. Colburn came into court with a motion to have it set aside on the ground that he had forgotten to file an answer. The court refused to accept an answer and judgment was entered.

The Supreme Court, in its syllabus, says: "A motion to reopen a default is a matter within the sound judicial discretion of the trial judge, and the latter's ruling therein will not be interfered with except in a clear case of abuse."

LUNATIC COLLINS GETS A VOLLEY OF SHOTS

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

Henry Glass, Who Quelled a Murderous Lunatic.

Revolver shots, screams of women for help and sounds of men struggling awoke the residents in the vicinity of Beretania and Piikoi about 5 o'clock yesterday morning and when the excitement had subsided the bleeding form of a bulky ill-dressed man, bound hand and foot was removed from the little cottage on the Waikiki-makal corner and lifted into the police patrol wagon and taken to the Queen's Hospital. Another man holding a handkerchief to flowing wounds upon his head, left the house at the same time and sought a physician. The man taken to the hospital was John Collins, the lunatic for whom the police had been searching all night, and the latter was Henry Glass, an employee of Davies & Co., both being badly wounded. Collins had received three bullet wounds in his abdomen inflicted by Henry Glass in self-defense. Glass had received two dangerous wounds on the left side of his head, these being inflicted by a hatchet wielded by John Collins with maniacal fury.

The story of the search for Collins on Friday night was told in yesterday's Advertiser. Just where the man spent the night is not certain, but about 4:30 a. m., Collins appeared at the Makiki Fire Station where he had once been employed, and in the kitchen found Ben Foster, a houseman, who was preparing the early morning coffee for the men. He had asked for a cup of coffee. He had told it was used to cut wood. Mr. Markham, the ice-man, was in the kitchen at the same time. Suddenly Collins lunged forward and struck Foster a heavy blow with the hatchet on the left side of the head, cleaving the bone from the eye to a point just above the ear, and exposing the eye-ball. Foster fell to the floor, and being unarmed, Markham fled with Collins in pursuit. Both made a circuit of the wagon outside and Markham then ran for Charles Crane's residence, from which place the Police Station was called up and the patrol wagon called for. Foster on recovering consciousness crawled to the main fire house and a physician was summoned. The man was sent to the Queen's Hospital.

Collins evidently ran down to Beretania street and made his way direct to the cottage at the corner of Piikoi and Beretania streets occupied by Henry and David Glass, their aunt and sister. The first intimation they had was when a pane of glass in the front French window was shattered. Henry leaped out of bed, caught up a big 25 caliber revolver, and not seeing any one fired a shot. He then walked around to the front porch and entered the parlor. As he did so he saw a burly man with a hatchet in hand coming toward him from the dining room. David Glass encountered the man instantly and struck him in the face with his fist. The intruder gave him a blow with the flat of the hatchet on the head. Henry Glass seeing his brother's danger, fired point blank at Collins striking him in the pit of the stomach. Before Glass could pull the trigger a second time he was struck a fearful blow on the top of the head with the hatchet. He shot again, the bullet striking the man's stomach, and received another hatchet blow. A third shot was answered by a second hatchet stroke over Glass' left temple. David then closed in and grappled the intruder by the throat. Henry fired once more and the hatchet fell from Collins' hand. He then struck the prowler on the nose with the butt of the gun, breaking that member.

Both men, wounded as they were, threw the lunatic to the floor and then landed him on a settee. The wounded man, with three bullets in his stomach, and bleeding fast, made a desperate struggle, but several yards of clothes-line brought by the aunt of the young men, was soon about his wrists and ankles. The flash from one of the shots had set a portiere on fire and this was half burned before the blaze was discovered and the fabric thrown into the street. Neighbors assisted the two young men in holding the prisoner and as the patrol wagon came by on its way to the fire station it was hailed and Collins was taken to the Hospital. His struggles there were fearful and he retained his nerve through the trying ordeal, except to shout occasionally, "Oh, the pain."

When Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth came in he opened his eyes and said, "Hello, Charlie, how are you? I guess I'm gone, make 'em, well, good-bye boys." Dr. Wood operated on the man and found that one bullet had entered the abdominal cavity and could not be found; another had gone through it and lodged in the hip and another slug was found between shirt and skin. It was thought that Collins would die during the day, but he rallied and last evening was seemingly strong, although under the influence of opiates. Dr. Waterhouse attended the wounds of Ben Foster and Dr. Cooper those of Glass, which were severe, the hatchet striking the bone both times but happily not fracturing it.

Collins was a powerful man physically, with arm muscles like steel. Had not the plucky young Scotchmen brought him down in a struggle that was well nigh fatal to both of them, Collins might have run amuck through the rest of the neighborhood. On learning that he had entered a house occupied by Scotch people, Collins said, "If I had known there were good Scotch people here I would never have come in."

The theory is advanced that after pursuing Markham, Collins became possessed of the insane idea to go to Markham's house which is directly opposite the Glass's house. The theory is that Collins in his blind fury mistook the Glass's house for that of Markham, and if so many lives were undoubtedly saved by the mistake.

Dr. Wood's official report on the wounds of Collins and Foster, is as follows: Collins—Struck by three bullets; one perforated the intestines twice and the other two made flesh wounds only; the abdominal cavity was opened and two perforations of the intestines found and stitched up. He has a fair chance to recover.

Foster—Has a bad hatchet wound in the bone at the outer angle of the left eye, penetrating the orbit but not opening the cranial cavity. He will recover although his left eye may be damaged.

SOLDIER CASES GO OVER FOR TERM

The cases of all three of the soldiers who are under indictment for the robbery of Chief Justice Frear's home have been continued for the term. Carlton is still out on bail, but his two companions have not been able to secure bondsmen.

Major McClellan has been requested by the War Department to investigate the affair, and not with the intention of thwarting the ends of justice. Carlton has influential friends in the States. His father is clerk of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, and the Justices of that court are also interesting themselves in the fate of the young soldier.
